

ABSTRACT

[0059] Systems and methods for replicating all or part of a data store are described. According to one embodiment, a system and method for providing a data store of stored events, wherein the events comprise user interactions with articles, identifying a desired portion of the data store for replication, and replicating the structure and content of the desired portion of the data store is described.